

Weather Forecast Update

NWS Albuquerque
Thursday, February 3

Highlights

- Not as brutally cold tonight, but still below zero for many locations including the northern valleys
- Gradual day-to-day upward trend in temperatures through weekend
- Areas of snow northern mountains and northeast late tonight/pre-dawn hours Friday
  - Accumulations generally 1-3" with isolated heavier amounts near Colorado state line
- Chance of snow northeast half Saturday, with chances increasing and expanding over the east and north Saturday evening through Sunday morning
  - Accumulations generally 1-3" lower elevations; up to 5-6" higher terrain
- Temperatures trending downward north-central and northeast quarter Sunday-Monday, but not extreme

Forecast Lows Tonight

Lows (F) Fri AM Feb 04 2011

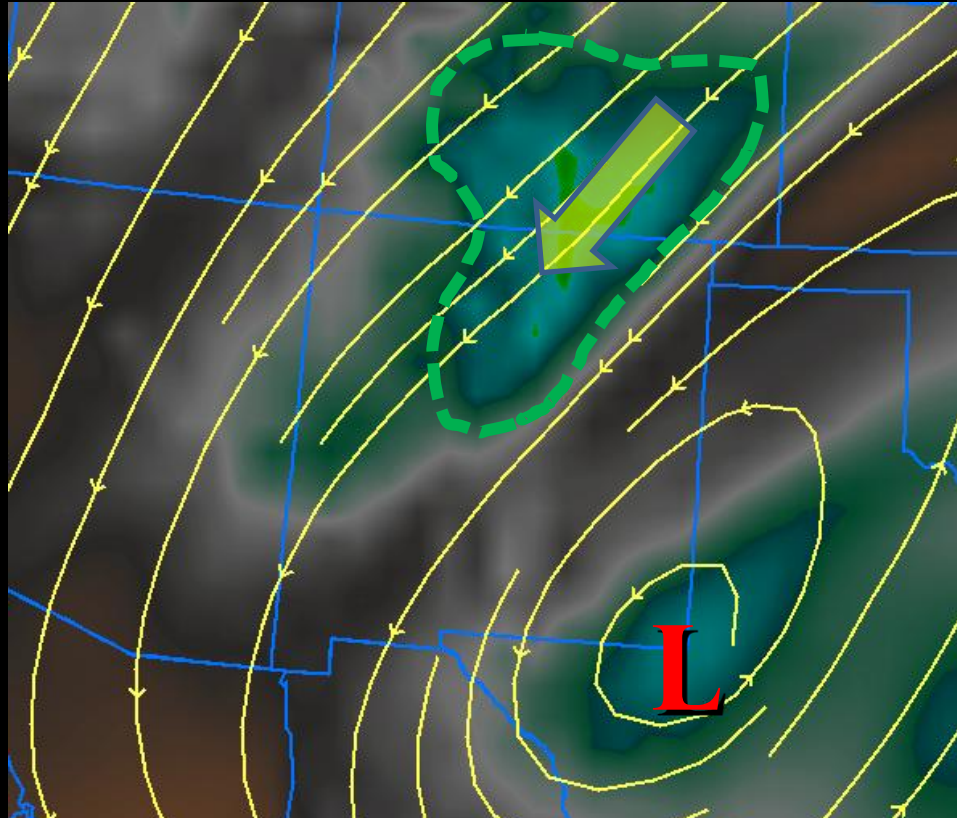

Forecast

24-Hour Change

Upper Level Forecast Chart

Valid 11pm Thursday (Image = Moisture)

Small and quick-hitting disturbance will bring areas of snow to NC and NE areas of state later tonight into the pre-dawn hours Friday. Expect a quick 1-3" of accumulation favoring the higher terrain and areas near the NM/CO border.

TONIGHT

*Disturbance Moving Out of Colorado
To Bring Snow to the Northeast*

*Snow Showers
1 to 3 inches*

Not Quite As Cold

Last Updated: 18:29 MST

Thursday, February 3, 2011

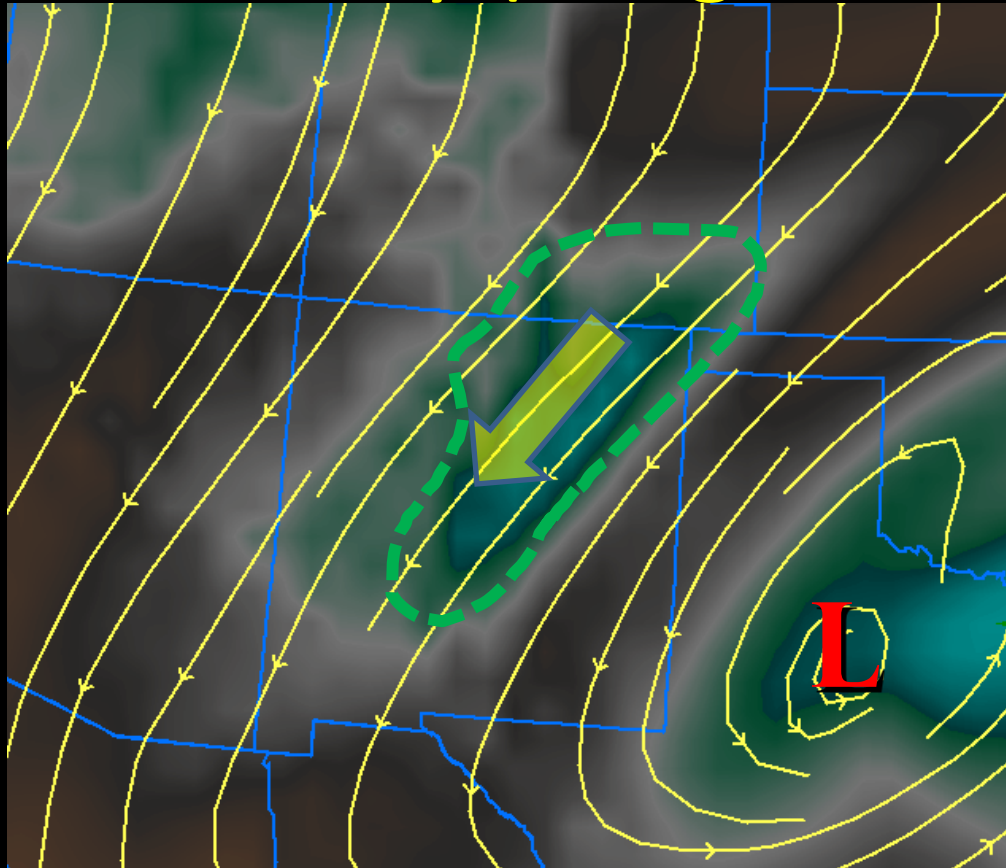

National Weather Service – Albuquerque, NM

Upper Level Forecast Chart

Valid 5am Friday (Image = Moisture)

Areas of mainly light snow could develop as far south as the Santa Fe area and Sandia/Manzano Mountains just before daybreak Friday. Otherwise, focus will be along the I-25 corridor from Glorieta to Las Vegas to Springer to Raton.

Forecast Highs Friday

Forecast

Departure from Normal

Forecast Lows Friday Night

Forecast

24-Hour Change

Weekend Temperatures

Saturday

Sunday